THE FREE-HOLDER.

K Periodical Rel-
ds

THE FREE-HOLDER,

OR

Political Essays.

LONDON.

Printed for D. MIDWINTER at the three Crowns in St. Paul's Churchyard; and J. TONSON at Shakespear's Head in the Strand. 1716.

MVSEVM
BRITAN
NICVM

CONTENTS

Of the following

ESSAYS.

N°. I. THE Title and Deſign of this Work.

II. Of His Majesty's Character.

III. The Memoirs of a Preſton Rebel.

IV. Reaſons why the Britiſh Ladies ſhould ſide with the Free-holder.

V. Of the Love which we owe to our Countrey.

VI. The

VI. The Guilt of Perjury.

VII. Of Party Lies.

VIII. The Female Aſſociation.

IX. Anſwer of the Free-holders of Great-Britain to the Pretender's Declaration.

X. Arbitrary Power, exemplified in the Conduct of Muly Iſhmael Emperor of Morocco.

XI. Subſcriptions to the Female Aſſociation.

XII. The Guilt of Rebellion in general, and of the late Rebellion in particular.

XIII. Of thoſe who are indifferent in a time of Rebellion.

XIV. The Political Creed of a Tory Male-content.

XV. Project of the Ladies for making king the Fan ſerviceable to the Proteſtant Cauſe.

XVI. On the late Act of Parliament for ſuſpending the Habeas Corpus Act.

XVII. How Miniſters of State ſhould bear an undeſerved Reproach.

XVIII. Of the late French Edict for increaſing the Value of their Louis d'Ors.

XIX. The unchriſtian Spirit of our late Party Writings.

XX. Of the late Act of Parliament for laying four Shillings in the Pound on Land.

XXI. The Birth-day of Her Royal Highneſs the Princeſs of Wales.

XXII. The Character and Converſation of a Tory Fox-hunter.

XXIII. A Cartel for the Britiſh Ladies, during their preſent State of War.

XXIV. The

The CONTENTS.

XXIV. The Deſigns of HIS MAJESTY'S Enemies impracticable.

XXV. Of the Fickleneſs of the Britiſh Politicks.

XXVI. Conſiderations offered to the diſaffected part of the Fair Sex.

XXVII. The Viſion of a ſecond-ſighted Highlander.

XXVIII. Several uſeful Maxims to be learned from the preſent Rebellion.

XXIX. The Practice of Morality neceſſary to make a Party flouriſh.

XXX. Of the Vanity of the French Nation.

XXXI. Anſwer to a celebrated Pamphlet entituled, An Argument to prove the Affections of the Pople of England to be the beſt Security of the Government; humbly offered to the Conſideration of the Patrons of Severity

Severity, and apply'd to the preſent Juncture of Affairs.

XXXII. Artifices of the Malecontents to draw the Women into their Party.

XXXIII. The particular concern of learned Societies to cultivate the Favour of their Prince.

XXXIV. Abſurdity of admitting a ſpirit of Party into publick Diverſions, and particularly thoſe of the Play-houſe.

XXXV. Of modern Hiſtorians.

XXXVI. Annals of the Pretender's Reign.

XXXVII. Ill Conſequences of the late Cry of the Churches Danger, with regard to Religion.

XXXVIII. Propoſals for a Truce between the Ladies of either Party.

XXXIX. Character of the late Lord Somers, publiſhed on the Day of his Interrment.

XL. The

XL. The uſual Treatment of ſuch men as make themſelves Authors.

XLI. Advantages to the Spaniſh Trade obtained by His preſent Majesty.

XLII. Advantages to our Commerce in the Netherlands obtained by His preſent Majesty.

XLIII. The Inconſiſtence of a Popiſh Prince and Proteſtant Subjects.

XLIV. Tory Foxhunter's Account of the Maſquerade on the Birth of the Arch-Duke.

XLV. The Uſe and Advantage of Wit and Humour under proper Regulations.

XLVI. His Majesty's Birth-day.

XLVII. Converſion of the Tory Foxhunter.

XLVIII. Of Miniſters of State, eſpecially in Great Britain.

XLIX. Thankſ-

The CONTENTS.

XLIX. Thankſgiving Day for ſuppreſſing the late Rebellion.

L. The Folly and Miſchief of Mobs and Riots.

LI. Cautions to be obſerved in the reading of ancient Greek and Roman Hiſtorians.

LII. Of State Jealouſy.

LIII. Britons, Free-thinkers in Politicks.

LIV. Preference of the Whig-Scheme to that of the Torys.

LV. Concluſion.